A View of the Harbour by Elizabeth Taylor

This is the third novel by Taylor I have read and I think this is the best so far. It is set in a small seaside town in southern England. It is a quite claustrophobic piece focussing on a small group of the town's residents.

Elizabeth Taylor – A View of the Harbour – Stuck in a Book

A View of the Harbour is set in a seaside town, seen initially through the eyes of an amateur artist, Bertram, who is attempting to capture (indeed) a view of the harbour. At the same time, of course, Elizabeth Taylor is capturing her own view of the harbour – and all the emotions which the people living there (pun alert) harbour.

A View of the Harbour – New York Review Books

A View of the Harbour is Taylor's lightest novel, and by that I mean that it's done with an exquisite lightness of touch. It has a large cast, a musical rondo like structure, and it's her happiest novel, too, but happy in the way of, say, Così fan tutte or Bergman's Fanny and Alexander, where the infelicities of life are shown through the prism of an exquisitely aesthetic sensibility.

A View of The Harbour, Elizabeth Taylor #1947club | BookerTalk

What a lot of unhappy people inhabit the fishing village chosen as the setting of Elizabeth Taylor's A View from the Harbour. Loneliness and disappointment seep out from almost every house that sits on the sea front.

A View of the Harbour by Elizabeth Taylor ...

A View of the Harbour may be Taylor's most nuanced study of the push and pull between domestic and artistic labor." —Namara Smith, The New Yorker "Gently raining. Camellias are blooming, it's cold. . . .

A View of the Harbour : Elizabeth Taylor : 9781590178485

Blindness and betrayal are Elizabeth Taylor's great subjects, and in A View of the Harbour she turns her unsparing gaze on the emotional and sexual politics of a seedy seaside town that's been left behind by modernity.

A night of cocktails, hors d'oeuvres, a live auction, and inspiring stories of education and empowerment over sunset views of Southport Harbor.

A View of the Harbour (Virago Modern Classics): elizabeth ...

This is a neatly plotted book about three subjects that seem unappealing: an unlovely but nice old woman with good manners, the problem of getting through the end of life all alone, and betrayals even by people who like you.
